

NATIVE STUDIES, MINOR

Additional course credits may be applied to the minor requirements from archaeological and ethnographic field schools.

The Native Studies Program

The Native Studies Minor focuses on the political sovereignty of indigenous societies and the historical experience of colonialism in the Americas and the Pacific. With a range of courses in Native history, literature, art history, archaeology, ethnography, museum studies and linguistics, the Minor is designed for those students who wish to learn in some depth the history, culture, language, and collective identities of indigenous peoples in the Americas, and who wish to acquire in-depth knowledge regarding tribal affairs, education, and public policies at the local and global levels.
